Object: Change of UKAS accreditation symbol

Dear Client,

We would like to inform you that the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS) has introduced a new single generic management system accreditation symbol. It will replace all of the existing management system accreditation symbols that specify the type of management system covered by the accreditation.

What are the timelines?

You will need to update relevant materials before the end of December 2013.

What are the consequences for you?

If you are using LRQA's joined marks to promote your certification(s), you will need to cease using the LRQA joined marks that include specific management system accreditation symbols, and switch to the new joined mark(s).

If you are in the process of renewing a certification, your certificate will include the new accreditation mark and you will need to start to use the new joined mark(s).

What does it really mean?

LRQA will provide you with the new joined marks, combining the relevant product approval mark(s) with the new single generic management system accreditation symbol.
